“Just because it left the headlines, doesn’t mean it left the planet.”

In support of the efforts of Aid Still Required, Morgan Freeman has agreed to the auction of an “experience” with him, which can be won through auction style bidding, hosted by Omaze. The experience will include a red carpet meet and greet, two tickets to the premiere of his latest film Transcendence, and two tickets to the after party. This is a very exciting opportunity and with the bidding starting at only $10 it’s worth a try to support a phenomenal cause!

Aid Still Required is a non-profit with a new and newsworthy view on foreign aid. We all know that when a disaster occurs, especially in places like Haiti and Indonesia, or in the occurrence of an event like Hurricane Katrina, that immediate needs must be met to secure the health and safety of those affected. Still, how much good has been done when the life you saved is in danger from the very same thing that afflicted him or her just a week earlier?

A focus on creating sustainable change has never really been a huge method for a lot of charities who are traditionally involved in providing relief aid. Immediate relief is only one part of the story of truly healing a place and it’s people, money must be allocated to create real, substantial, and sustainable change in infrastructure.

Nearly 70% of relief funds are spent in the first three months after a natural disaster or human crisis, and little to no thought is given to what will happen later. With a huge allegiance of celebrity supporters that include Mia Farrow, Jared Leto, Sarah Silverman, and Common, Aid Still Required works to bring awareness to the forgotten victims of tragedy who are still in need and will continue to be in need until resources begin to be allocated in a way that helps better prepare for long time change.
